Gregory Bateson's world of difference: an introduction

Several implications of neoliberalism in the Western World since the 1990s threatens human values in Social Work. How by the Gregory Bateson perspective, particularly in the light of his quote "a difference that makes a difference", our understanding of the current situation in Social work may be enhanced? How supporting our sensitivity on subtle control mechanisms work, on the risks of the new governance and on potentials of tiny differences in fostering positive answers?
